The Pirate Bastards hunt a broken-down sloop filled with loot to an uncharted island. They have heard rumors that this island rises from the deep every few years and treasure hunters rush to find relics from the deep before it descends again. They circle the island in the Diablo looking for a good place to send a small craft ashore.

The crew land their rowboat at what they believe is an abandoned Smuggler's Camp with Beard, Frenchie, and Decon in tow. They were ambushed by pirates trying to take advantage of them, but the dirty pirate bushwackers were easily outmatched. They learned that although the jungle is dangerous, they found a path to a ruined temple. They send the last pirate to his death. They blew open the other passage. They were attacked by ghoulish beasts from a previous time, despite almost getting the rotting disease, they took the tchotchkes and gold and left after an urn exploded burning their lungs.

The crew returns to the ship to rest and recuperate. When they return, they find that the island is beginning to sink. They shoot up the grove of willow trees on the northeast shore. They see corpses fall from the boughs of some trees that then pick themselves up and shuffle into the sea. Creepy.

They land at an abandoned Spanish village and are shot at by the sniper Bill of Blue Waters who tells them to bring him the heads of the cultists. This time they take Frog, Specs, and Hook. Then they bring the ship up toward the Wharf. The ship is attacked by a titanic chthonic octopus as they fight their way onto the docks. There they find some loot taken from the seas and a penis-biting giant rat. The final building is trapped to explode. Curly ducks just before he is skewered by a metal fitting and Red Eye dives into the sea to escape the blast.

They find a path to travel inland and find a ruined galleon risen from the sea. Inside, they find six waterproof barrels filled with black powder. Once again, they decide to retire to recover their resources before continuing their search, but not before shooting more cannons at the cursed grove of Willow trees.
