Chinamen Terrorize Cobblepot Towers Honest Americans save the day

The City Goes Wild!!

by Tomkin Wallop

A gang of ruthless Chinese terrorists went on a rampage on the observation deck of Cobblepot Towers North on Saturday. The fiends used sticks and guns to injure several innocent tourists, but were foiled when the “Puma Man” intervened. Despite his ineffectual presence at the Myrtle May’s Massacre, Puma Man proved himself a promising protector of the city this day, apprehending several of the thugs. Thanks also are owed to Captain Henry Freemont, late of the Treasury Department and the U.S. Army, who rescued Mrs. Eleanor Robertson, who had been seized and threatened with a gun in the hands of the Chinese. Several other unknown citizens helped foil this dastardly plot.

Cobblepot, Cobble-Bust?

by Skip Haversham

News from the financial district is that Desmond Cobblepot has been frantically searching for emergency financing for some project or another. Major banks and financial houses have all turned him down. Is this a sign that the Cobblepot Empire is crashing to the ground? Has the ongoing Depression claimed another victim?

Dump Disorder

by Lester Fudge

A number of loud explosions, crashing sounds, and dead Chinamen were in evidence Sunday night at the city dump compactor facility. The mayor’s office says that there is nothing to worrying about, that all the noise and death can be explained by a serious methane eruption from the dump base itself, caused by poor lading by Chinese contractors, who have since been fired. The mayor will be taking bids for a new management team within the week.
